The International Finance Corporation (IFC) was in process of conducting a biomass scoping study in the Europe and Central Asia, and the Middle East and North Africa regions (ECA/MENA Biomass Scoping Study). Environics was commissioned to present a scoping study on the case of Egypt.

Environics conducted an exhaustive literature review and extensive interviews with various entities to identify Egypt's potential for bio-energy. A briefing memo was developed, which identified the potential areas and resources for the generation of this alternative type of energy.
